The Foreign Legion allows France to have since 1831 a fighting troop made up of foreigners whose characteristics and qualities are known, recognized, and respected worldwide

The Legion is also a successful system of the integration into French society of foreign men who have chosen to serve the country honorably, until the supreme sacrifice if necessary

Always able to adapt to the environments in which it is involved, even the most extreme, with the most modern techniques, to the enemy with which it is confronted

From the Legion's inception until today, the «Code of Honor» has been the true pillar and the main symbol of valor and honor for all members within this military fraternity. An instilled philosophy of dedication and self-sacrifice, it has created a system of trust and respect among the soldiers, allowing them to achieve their goals despite cultural, racial and religious differences. These unshakable tenets have been passed down through the ages and have become even more important in our uncertain times.

The Code of Honour

1. Legionnaire, you are a volunteer, serving France with honour and fidelity.
2. Each legionnaire is your brother in arms, whatever his nationality, his race or his religion might be. You will demonstrate this by the strict solidarity which must always links members of the same family.
3. Respect for traditions, devotion to your leaders, discipline and comradeship are your strengths, courage and loyalty your virtues.
4. Proud of your status as Legionnaire, you display this in your always impeccable uniform, your always dignified but modest behaviour, and your clean living quarters.
5. An elite soldier, you train rigorously, you will maintain your weapon as your most precious possession and you take constant care of your physical form.
6. The mission is sacred, you carry it out until the end and, if necessary in the field, at the risk of your life.
7. In combat, you act without passion and without hate, you will respect defeated enemies, and you never abandon your dead, your wounded, nor surrender your arms.
